Wireguard, yes. Youc an get away with a 512M KVM based VPS for a couple bucks a month, and you won't have to deal with the jew know whos

You must be 18 to post here.
Most VPN IP ranges are blocked, either by default or because bots use them.
- >>86780128 \(You\)
Yes, but you need a server to set it up.
I remember using AWS free tier for this a few years ago, with OpenVPN.
It won't protect you against the law should you do anything illegal, but it's usually enough to evade college blockers and post.

- a few years ago when I used a vpn i tired many different server locations and there was like a 5% chance one of them wasn't banned

Unironically get the pass. I'm not trying to shill or anything, but if you're gonna use this site for any length of time, the pass will allow you to post from behind a VPN.
>20 USD/year for 4chan Pass
>5 USD/month for Mullvad VPN
It's worth it if your time is worth less than 80 USD/year

There Is no point doing this if your 4chan instance isn't already mined meaning if you buy the pass to go behind A vpn you're still visible because your cookies didn't change or your writing style and time zone habits

I could easily delete all my cookies and so what? My family just keep going in my home and I can't change them. They use Androids

I use wireguard. Surely you can find a tutorial in your language.

setting your own VPN doesn't help you bypass content restrictions and change your IP to any country you desire
