QRD on manifest?

>>

Anonymous 05/03/22(Tue)10:52:33 No.86784922 ►

>>86784896
Manifest v3 refers to the next major revision of Chromium's browser extension framework. The concern for adblockers is what Google is doing with the webRequest set of APIs. webRequest allows extensions to control every step of the request, from creation to completion and everything in between. It's very powerful and allows for very good content blockers, developer tool add-ons, etc. Google is replacing it with DNR, instead of allowing extensions to modify requests directly, DNR forces the extension to simply hand its filters to the browser, and it needs to trust the browser to execute them. The actual filter types it supports are very basic and it has extreme limitations

This is bad, not only because it weakens adblockers significantly, but because it creates a single, stable target for ad networks to bypass, effectively killing the "adblocker arms race" that was only possible with a general interface like webRequest.
